JBG is moving ahead on its long-ago-announced plan to convert to condos the Wardman Tower building of the Marriott Hotel (the one at the corner of Connecticut near the Metro elevator). A description of the plan and some drawings are on the website. JBG does not need any special regulatory approvals to change the building from a hotel to residences. It does need HPRB approval to make changes to the building's exterior. The plans will be discussed at Tuesday's WPCA Board meeting and (unless the schedule changes) at the September 16 ANC meeting.
