There is a zoning code limit on restaurants in the WP business district, adopted in order to preserve room for other neighborhood-serving businesses. The current crop of restaurants already exceed that limit. A landlord is now asking the city to make an exception for a restaurant in its building. The landlord says that it needs this exception because only a national chain restaurant can offer the credit rating and financial stability it's looking for in a tenant. WPCA will consider whether to take a position on this application at the fall meeting.

HPRB consideration of McDonald's proposal to revamp the exterior of its Connecticut Avenue location has been postponed at least to December. WPCA's opposition to the proposal is online.
